Mobile home owners ask for rent control

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

There was standing room only Monday night in Upland City Hall as the Mobilehome Owners for Residential Equality (MORE) requested that the City Council consider Upland's first form of rent control.

Three spokesmen for MORE urged the council to consider a "rent stabilization" ordinance for the city's six mobile home parks.

A sympathetic council established a fact-finding committee and a public hearing for a proposed rent control ordinance.

The committee will meet Sept. 2 at 7 p.m. at City Hall to hear how the mobile home owners and park owners have negotiated lease agreements. The public hearing will be held Sept. 22.

The plea for rent control came as the result of a three-year lease contract offer by the owners of the Upland Meadows Mobile Estates park on Foothill Boulevard. The owners — HWL Properties — presented the tenants with a three-year proposal for a 13.3 percent rent increase the first year, and a 9 percent hike each of the following years.

When the mobile home owners objected, Upland Meadows management then suggested their tenants pay an 11 percent rent increase the first year, and a 10.5 percent increase each of the following years. Outraged and frustrated, the tenants sought help from MORE.

Resident Vern Maxie asked the council to place a 60 to 90-day freeze on mobile home park space rents until it can research MORE's proposal and decide for or against a rent control ordinance. He also urged the council to take some sort of immediate action, because most residents' contracts with Upland Meadows expire Sept. 1.

The council opted against that proposal. City Attorney Donald Maroney said the council could make its ordinance retroactive to prevent the park owners from suddenly charging exhorbitant rates, hoping to base the stabilized rent on those higher rates.

Daniel Tenn, one of the owners of Upland Meadows, assured the council that the same three-year contract proposal others have already signed will be available to all tenants for 60 days beyond Sept. 1, in the event they decide later to opt for a three-year contract instead of a month-to-month or an annual agreement.

Terry Dowdall, attorney for the park owners, noted that the tenants agreed three years ago to a 10 percent rent increase at the expiration of their contract, and that this proposal only increased that amount by 3 percent.

Dowdall said the park owners found it necessary to further hike rents because after purchasing the park 1½ years ago the property was reassessed (according to Proposition 13), and they have had to pay the higher property taxes while tenants benefitted from three-year contracts.

He warned the council that if the rent is stabilized, the owners may not be able to complete improvements tenants are seeking. MORE President Gordon Ingraham said his group does not expect rents to remain stagnant. "We feel and recognize the need of the park owners to receive a fair return on their investment, rental increases sufficient to cover the increased costs of repairs, maintenance, insurance, upkeep and additional amenities," he told the council.

The need for rent stabilization in mobile home parks is not new, Ingraham said. "Upland is not unique. Almost all cities near us and other counties have ordinances of this kind," he said.

Dowdall said these ordinances may soon be found unconstitutional, as was a rent control ordinance in Berkeley. He pointed out he was instrumental in the defeat of mobile home rent stabilization ordinances in five California cities, and expects the state Supreme Court to outlaw further attempts at controls.

In other action, the council heard protests from the residents of San Antonio Heights about a proposed annexation of approximately five acres of commercial property north of 24th Street and west of Euclid Avenue.

Developers proposing a Smith-Food King supermarket on the property requested the city initiate the annexation so the shopping center could tap into the city's water and sewer lines at regular rates.

Spokesman Tom Garnella said he had petitions with more than 823 signatures from Heights residents opposed to the annexation. They oppose the move because the city would take away the area's only commercial tax base, Garnella explained.

"There are some people who feel this is the plum of the Heights," Garnella said. "We think the city is just going for the plum of the area."

Girl, 15, awarded trophy for essay on sister city

Beth Langdon, 15, of Upland, received a trophy and a $25 cash prize for her essay "Mildura, Australia and Upland, California — Sister Cities" composed for the annual writing competition sponsored by the Upland Sister City Association.

Langdon, a sophomore at Upland High School this fall, received her trophy from Upland Mayor John McCarthy on behalf of the mayor of Mildura, Lloyd Beasy. Last year, Michelle McLaughlin of Mildura won the competition and received a similar award from the city of Upland.

This annual competition was begun in Mildura to foster closer ties between that city and Upland. Langdon was honored at the annual spring meeting of the Upland Sister City Association at the Chaffey Cultural Center.

Langdon's essay focuses on the similarities between Upland and Mildura resulting from the Chaffey brothers' comparable designs, as well as the contrasts. "Both cities were founded in the late 1800s, with water as the key to success... The overall pictures of Upland and Mildura are definitely alike," she wrote. "It is obvious that the ideas came from the same people... It is amazing to me how two cities can be so closely related and so many miles apart."

Chino Valley Bank shifts Upland offices to Mountain Ave. location

Chino Valley Bank has moved their Upland office to new quarters in the Chino Valley Bank Building at 11th and Mountain Avenue, from the original site which opened in 1980 at San Antonio Avenue and Foothill Boulevard. Fred Kreutzkamp is vice president and manager of the Upland office.

Ribbon cutting ceremonies were conducted during a grand opening reception held recently. Over 2,500 people were in attendance. Following the official ceremony, a donation of the ribbon money was made to the Chaffey Communities Cultural Center. Ms. Beatrice Riggs, director for the center, was present to acceopt the donation.

The facility will provide numerous innovative services for the Upland customers including sit-down tellers. Chino Valley Bank is noted for their extended hours which the Upland office will maintain:

— Lobby open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Thursday; 10 a.m. to 6 pm. Friday; 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays.

— Walk-up windows open between 8:30 and 10 a.m. Monday-Friday.

— Convenient drive-up open 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Thursday; 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday; 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays.

The contemporary interior is enchanced by oak. Bradley Lewis of North Hollywood designed the "one of a kind" stained glass window set inside the bank. A replica of the tapestry displayed in the Chino main office, the work of art involves approximately 300 man hours and 2,500 pieces of glass.

The 7,600 square-foot bank was designed to blend with its Upland setting by architects Barmakian, Wolff, Lang, Christopher and built by K.L. Neff Construction Co.

R.C. police protection renewed

In routine action, the county Board of Supervisors approved a $2.38 million agreement Monday with the city of Rancho Cucamonga for ongoing law enforcement by the Sheriff's Department.

The agreement is actually the annual amendment to a continuing contract between the county and the city since Rancho Cucamonga's incorporation in late 1977.

Rancho Cucamonga has continued to rely on the Sheriff's Department for police services following the incorporation. The contract is updated annually for the county to recover the actual cost of the services.

For fiscal 1982-83, the agreement provides that the city pay the county $2,376,292. Rancho Cucamonga Mayor Jon Mikels has already signed the agreement on behalf of the city.

In other action, the board rejected all three bids received to supply pre-cast concrete for the new county center in San Bernardino.

Lynn Kirkhofer, assistant county administrative officer, said that only one of the three bids was actually valid.

"The first low bid was incorrectly submitted by the bidder, and he withdrew his bid. The second low bid was conditioned to the extent that it was found not to be acceptable based on the letter of conditions that the bidder submitted," he explained.

The three bids also showed a wide disparity in price. The bids were: Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., Arcadia, $1,473,717; Rockwin Corp., Santa Fe Springs, $2,410,000, and Tecon Pacific, West Sacramento, $2,695,000.

The board agreed that the project should go out again for bids.

Supervisors also approved collection of a $30 fee for each installment account in the Municipal and Justice courts. Installment accounts allow fines to be gradually paid off.

Financial assistance applications accepted

Applications for financial assistance for the coming year currently are being accepted from non-profit organizations working in the visual and performing arts, it was announced by Maurice Goodban, chairman of the admissions and allocations committee of the Inland Empire Cultural Foundation.

The foundation also is known by its acronym CLASS — Cultural League Advocating Support of the arts in Society. It conducts an annual fund-raising campaign throughout the metropolitan areas of San Bernardino and Riverside counties acting as a "united way for the arts." Currently there are 20 member organizations supported through this single fund-raising effort.

Goodban said information on applying for grants for a fiscal year beginning next April 1 are available from the foundation's office at 824-8240. The deadline for receipt of completed written applications is Sept. 25, 1982.

Music festival is already paying off at regional park

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

When the music's over San Bernardino County will inherit a number of improvements from the large outdoor festival next month at Glen Helen Regional Park.

The US Festival scheduled for Labor Day weekend is expected to attract about 300,000 concertgoers to the regional park near Devore, but it is also expected to permanently improve facilities at the 500-acre park.

Unuson — the San Jose-based corporation sponsoring the festival — expects to spend between $2.5 million and $3 million for improvements at Glen Helen.

How many of those improvements will become permanent is still a question.

"It's hard to tell how much will be used in the future," said Craig Tocher, the company's chief of development.

Tocher said a number of "temporary" type improvements such as a 60-acre dirt parking lot might or might not be used by the park in the future.

One of the biggest permanent changes to occur was the sculpting of a 57-acre outdoor amphitheater.

At a cost of about $300,000, Unuson bulldozed 300,000 cubic yards of dirt to create the bowl-shaped facility.

As a result, the amphitheater was increased from 20 acres to its present size, Tocher said.

In the way was a 55-foot high mound called Roadrunner Hill and a drainage channel. Dirt from the mound was used to divert the swail in another location.

"What the county winds up with is a large bowl-shaped area that up to 250,000 people can use," said Jack Peddy, administrator of the county Environmental Public Works Agency.

"Obviously there are few times when that will occur, but it gives Glen Helen the chance to handle large affairs up to whatever size."

But Peddy noted the county now faces the prospect of maintaining the bowl, which was planted and irrigated by Unuson for the US Festival.

The company buried an irrigation line that can be connected to sprinkler lines in the future, Tocher said.

"Years ago they had a temporary irrigation pipe that was used to water like farmers do, but that was very intensive labor and they had to cut back when Proposition 13 passed," Tocher said.

Unuson will continue to irrigate the area until winter rains can take over, Peddy added.

After that, the county will have to decide if and when it plans to continue irrigation, he said.

Using local labor for most of its work at the site, Unuson installed permanent water lines, pumping stations and renovated a reservoir.

In addition, it graded a campground and parking area on private property and constructed a temporary offramp along Interstate 15.

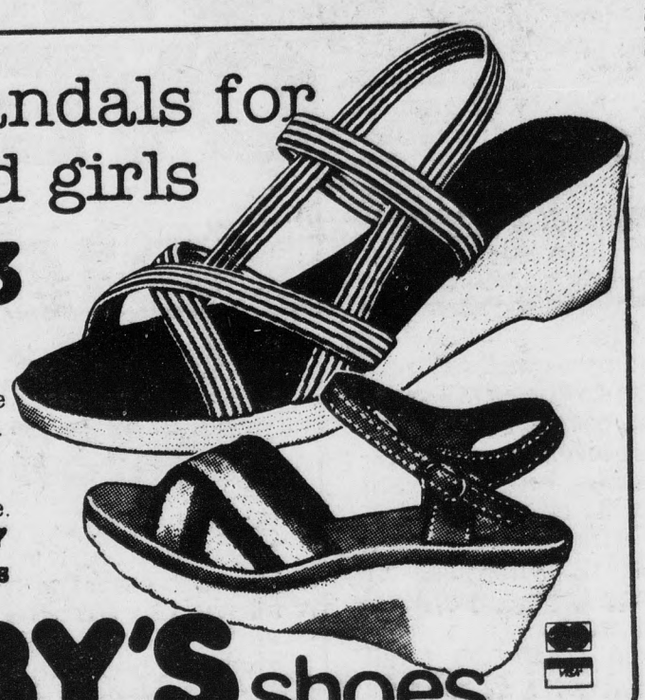

One addition that will be installed after the festival is a swimming area.

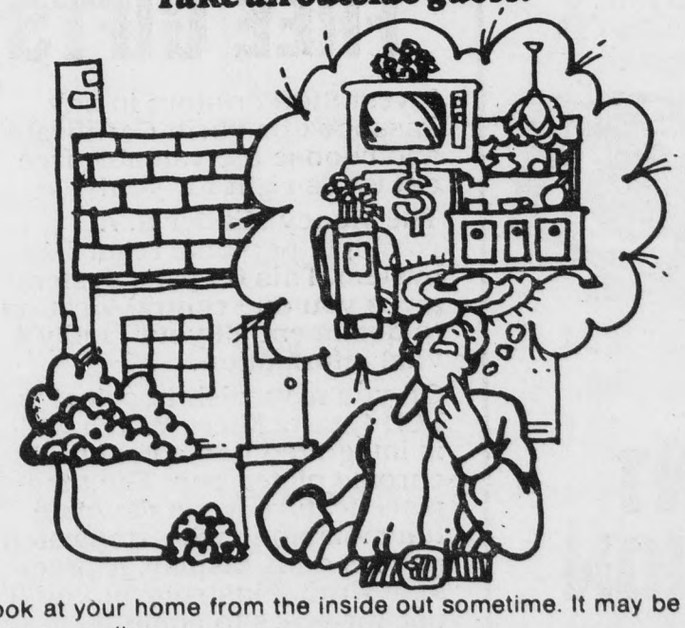

"We didn't have time to install it before the festival so now we'll be doing it after," Tocher said.

Because of poor water quality, lakes within the park will be off limits to would-be swimmers during the festival.

Tocher said a low fence will be installed around the lakes and those thinking of taking a dip will be discouraged from doing so.

Sale of local vintner due to be completed

By ANDREA ADELSON
Staff Writer

Brookside Vineyard Co., crushing grapes and producing wine here since 1955 and owned for the last decade by a giant food corporation, will itself be harvested today, sold for an undisclosed sum to a private Bay Area investor group.

The investor group, led by a senior vice president of a respected commercial brokerage firm headquartered in San Francisco, is expected to liquidate most of Brookside's holdings in the next five years, say officials involved in the ownership transfer.

The new owners remain close-to-the-vest with their operating plan, but those involved say Brookside can bottle and sell from its existing inventory without harvesting from its vineyards or buying grapes from local growers.

Some of the 19 retail stores where Brookside's 100 varieties are marketed will be closed, and new employees are being brought in, including a general manager replacing the firm's long-time president, Rene Biane.

The one property likely to be closely held is Brookside's acreage in Guasti, located southeast of the Ontario International Airport. That site is considered valuable commercial property if airport expansion blossoms as expected, observed one local grower who has followed the deal closely.

The investor group, whose identities have not been made public except for Norman Scheidt of Cushman & Wakefield, settled terms June 1 with Chicago-based Beatrice Foods.

Beatrice has attempted to sell Brookside twice in the last year because it has not "lived up to profit expectations."

Brookside's new owners have applied for license transfers from state alcohol regulators. The license transfer has nearly been completed, but will not be approved pending an investigation of the owners and a 30-day posting period, Alcohol Beverage Control board license supervisor Jack Brewer said.

Wholesale liquor licenses can be sold at anytime without interrupting operations, and are not as expensive as the limited retail licenses.

The new owners are also diligently attempting to find someone to operate the wine business, reported former President Biane.

Scheidt has also discussed appraising the value of Brookside's 370 acres of Temecula vineyards with a Rancho California agricultural service and farm management firm.

However, tight financing has blighted vineyard sales in recent years, according to real estate broker John Johnson of Doane-Western Inc. in Rancho California.

Johnson said the other local wineries could probably not accommodate fruit from Brookside's holdings, the largest vineyard parcel in Temecula, and would likely be uninterested in purchasing it.

For the first time in memory of one grower, Brookside informed local growers that no grapes would be purchased by the winemaker this vintage year.

16 seeking appointment as trustee

By ANDREA ADELSON
Staff Writer

Sixteen people are seeking appointment to fill a vacancy on the Chaffey College governing board created by the resignation of President Sharon King-Jeffers effective Aug. 23.

Applicants will be given five minutes to respond to prepared questions mailed to them in an open special meeting tonight at 6:30 p.m. After screening, selected applicants will be interviewed by the five trustees Friday at 7 p.m.

Prospective appointees were furnished information about the college.

Both are public meetings and will be conducted in the administrative board room.

Those seeking appointment are: Don W. Schafroth; Chaffey recall candidate and Cal Poly Pomona administrator Stephen Z. Whaley; Shirley Lees; former Chaffey student trustee Jeri L. Osmundsen; Lewis W. Trout and Donald E. Young, all of Rancho Cucamonga.

Others are Augustine Tapia of Chino, Fontana school district employee Philip Rue and Deborah LaBlanc of Montclair.

Ontario residents seeking appointment are twice-defeated Chaffey College board candidate Bobbie Little, Roger M. Lopez and Emery Brewer.

Residents of Upland vying for the job are Peter Blaszcak, Thomas Garnella, John Greenwood and Frederick R. Lamm.

Merilyn Watson, of the county registrar of voters office, said none of the other three community college districts within the county have had to fill board vacancies by appointment during the past year.

She said vacancies are more often filled by appointment than by special election, an expensive alternative that would cost Chaffey more than $100,000 because it straddles two counties.

The appointee will fill the unexpired term only until the next general election in November of 1983.

County Counsel Dan Hauter, advisor to the county's school districts, said there are no legal guidelines concerning selection of board members. He said trustees may conduct their interviews in private.

St. Mark's establishes kindergarten

St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Upland has established a kindergarten with plans to add one grade each year until the school reaches the eighth grade.

The school is open to all children of all races and creeds with class size limited to 20. Children will attend a brief daily chapel service presided over by the headmaster and occassionally by the Rev. Charles E. Bennison, the rector of St. Mark's, and the Rev. C. Robbins Clark, the curate.

The primary academic emphasis is on reading, mathematics and foreign languages, beginning in the kindergarten with Spanish. There also will be instruction in the arts and in science. The goal of the school is to provide a sound academic education in a Christian environment.

Serena Evans Beeks, the headmaster, was educated at the University of California at Berkeley, where she graduated with distinction with a major in music history and a minor in mathematics. She received a teaching credential and a master's degree in education at the Claremont Graduate School.

A member of Pi Lambda Theta, a national women's educational honor society, Mrs. Beeks has five years teaching experience and will be teaching the kindergarten class for the next few years until the administrative tasks at the school become full-time. Barbara Bronneck, the aide, has been a substitute teacher at St. Mark's Pre-School.

"Schools should give a firm grounding in the classical disciplines but should continually look to the future for new programs," believes Mrs. Beeks, who anticipates that computer science will become an important part of St. Mark's curriculum in the near future. This would not mean in the sense that computers will be used to teach students, but that the students will learn to program and understand computers and gain ability to use them flexibly and creatively.

One of the headmaster's primary goals for this year outside of the classroom is to obtain funding for a computer as she believes that kindergarten is by no means too young an age for beginning to learn about this subject.

Chino council picks interim city manager

Jim Hart, director of personnel and risk management, is the new interim city manager of Chino.

Mayor Larry Walker made the announcement of the unanimous action by the five members of the City Council following a brief executive session recently.

Hart will serve in the executive position vacated recently by John Gerardi until a nationwide search for a new city manager is completed.

Gerardi resigned to go into private business. Jim Diaz, finance director, filled in as acting city manager until the council appointment was made.

Hart, 30, was previously manpower administrator with an association of governments — similar to the Southern California Association of Governments — in Utah for two years.

Before that, he had worked as a Comprehensive Employment and Training Act administrator at Brigham Young University.

Hart holds a bachelor of arts degree in political science from Cal State Fullerton. He and his wife, Martha, reside in Rancho Cucamonga. They have two daughters, Jennifer, 11, and Christina, 5, and one son, Eric, 7.

He is a member of the Chino Rotary Club and also holds numerous memberships in professional organizations relating to personnel and risk management.

Hart voiced uncertainty on whether he will be among the candidates applying for the permanent city manager position.

Walker thanked Diaz for his cooperation and performance as as acting city manager. He also reported that Hart will receive a $300 pay differential in conjunction with the council's action naming him interim city manager.

In other action, the council unanimously approved an 11.75 percent increase in refuse rates for residents and businesses in Chino. The increase to Western Refuse Co. became effective Monday and continue through June 30, 1983.

The new schedule calls for a fee of $5.50 per month for single-family dwellings and $5.10 per month for each multi-family unit. The latter applies to apartments, duplexes, courts and mobile home parks. Commercial businesses without bins will be charged $11.70 per month for once-a-week collection of up to four containers.

Joe Guzzetta, assistant to the city manager, pointed out that the staff recommendation represented about four months of meetings and negotiations with representatives of Western Refuse. He said the last refuse fee increase had been granted in March 1981. That increase brought the charge for single-family homes to $4.90 per month.

Guzzetta said the majority of the businesses in Chino utilize the three-cubic-yard bins. The new rate schedule calls for fees of $36.90, $60.40, $80.60, $95.50, $117.80 and $140.80 for the respective collections from once to six times a week, he said.

In earlier reports, staff had recommended a 17 percent incrase to assist Western in offestting substantial inflationary cost increases.

Upland, Chino pilots make historic flight

It was not just another routine flight for pilots Tony Peich of Chino and Tim Dolan of Upland.

On a clear July day, the two climbed aboard Peich's single-engine 1978 Beechcraft Bonanza and took off on a 2,400-mile flight across the Pacific Ocean to Hawaii.

Before the trip's end, the valley residents would chalk up some memorable experiences. On the flight to the tropical paradise, they would learn the aircraft's horizontal situation indicator was not working properly. On the return flight they would react quickly to an engine sputtering from an empty gas tank.

And the pilots would have successfully covered the "longest leg" between two points of land in the world. Lifting off from Santa Barbara Airport, the experienced pilots met the challenge of the lonely flight to the island of Maui in 13 hours and 45 minutes.

Their dead reckoning was so accurate that they were not more than 10 miles off course when radio communication resumed after almost 10 hours of silence. And they had fuel to spare when they reached the tiny island in the blue Pacific.

Peich called Dolan last December and suggested they plan the trip. Without hesitation, Dolan agreed.

The men began doing their "homework." They sent for the necessary navigation maps and began collecting the requisite items for the trip. These included a high-frequency radio, two-man life raft equipped with emergency equipment, Mae West life preservers and a hand-held radio.

The rear seats were removed from the aircraft and tanks to hold an extra 100 gallons of gasoline were installed.

After checking the weather for a 10-day period, the pilots filed an instrument flight plan and on July 20 took off at 5:23 a.m.

There were a few "anxious" moments as the pilots contemplated what lay ahead — an unending stretch of water where "one wave looks just like another."

After "the (landing) gear was in the well," there was not "a boring moment" on the nearly 14-hour flight, said Peich. And there were few moments to relax.

Pilot Peich and navigator Dolan lost all navigational aids and communication with the mainland after about one hour. This, they emphasized, was expected.

But they had hoped the high-frequency radio used to communicate with other aircraft would function better. They were often unable to reach other airplanes on the airways to and from Hawaii. This was blamed on a warm high-pressure day and the radio being very sensitive to the sun's rays, the pilots said.

On those occasions when they did reach a jetliner traveling thousands of feet above them, the jet crews found it hard to believe they were talking to occupants of a single-engine plane. Some said they wouldn't fly in such a plane.

One Pan American Airlines navigator, however, asked the pilots to turn to a company frequency and "double checked" their navigation. "It was very reassuring."

Flying above the clouds at 8,000 feet, the valley pilots saw neither birds, ships nor "contrails" left by commercial airliners.

"We had been told to use contrails as navigational aids," one explained.

Following the plan they had mapped, the pilots corrected their course each hour according to a prepared procedure which took wind conditions into consideration.

It was nearly 10 hours before the Maui-bound crew, using the aircraft's automatic directional finder, contacted a radio station on Oahu. For nearly 1,500 miles, they had flown "on our own." The voice on the radio station was the first indication "that we really had it made."

As they made the final approach into Maui, the adventurers asked if anyone had been asking about them. The answer from the traffic controller: "Everybody."

Mrs. Peich and Mrs. Dolan were both on the ground waiting for their husbands to arrive. So were the agriculture inspectors who were satisfied when the pilots declared that all Mediterranean fruit flies had been left in California.

One Maui official said the pilots would be required to pay a landing fee. But another said the fees were imposed only on aircraft in excess of 12,500 pounds. Thus, the men flew blithely on to the Kona Coast on the island of Hawaii.

Once on the Big Island, the pilots learned the airplane had been impounded because they failed to pay that $5 landing fee in Maui. The matter was cleared and the large red bucket filled with concrete was removed from their plane after they paid the necessary fees.

After six days in Hawaii, Peich and Dolan switched pilot and navigator roles and began their return flight to the mainland. The flight was uneventful until they came within three miles of the Santa Barbara coast.

Suddenly the engine began to cough, a symptom of an empty gas tank. The men quickly switched tanks. The problem, they said, stemmed from the fact that the tank in operation registered half full.

The only real "nemesis" of the trip, they added, was failure of the high-frequency radio to operate as planned.

Both said the trip was successful because of their long experience and careful planning. Neither would advise a novice to attempt the lengthy flight.

"In order to make a trip, a person needs confidence in himself and his ability and confidence in the aircraft he's flying," said Peich.

Dolan first became interested in flying when he wandered away from his home with his pet dog when 3 years old. His mother found him at the airport.

Peich started flying when he was 16. In 1980, he flew to Yugoslavia.

He has researched a trip to South America but put that "on the back burner" because of the existing political conditions.

There is one certainty. The pilots plan on further adventure in the sky. Next year, Peich said, it may be "the big one" — a flight to Europe and hopefully into Russia.

Do your homework before you remodel your house

With home prices and mortgage interest rates still at record-high levels, an increasing number of people are choosing to remodel their present homes rathern than buy new ones.

Americans spent an estimated $50 billion in 1981 and are expected to spend nearly $65 billion in 1982 for roof repairs, storm windows and doors, room additions, modernized kitchens and bathrooms, finished basements and the like.

To insure a satisfactory remodeling job, home owners should plan ahead and do their homework, advises Roger Eckhart, consumer finance manager of Chicago Federal Savings and Loan Association, one of the Chicago area's leading thrift institutions.

Here are the precautions Eckhart recommends:

1. Choose the right contractor. "You should consider several contractors and get a minimum of three bids on your job," Eckhart advised. "Be sure the bids are for the identical work with the same deadlines and quality of materials."

Check each contractor's credit standing with his suppliers; his reputation for reliability and completing jobs on schedule; and referrals from previous customers before you decide.

2. Write a solid contract. It should state the full price payment schedule, specifications of all key construction materials, and a work completion schedule. It's a good idea to have your lawyer draw up the contract.

The contract should also hold the contractor responsible for doing the work in compliance with local codes and zoning.

Junior high school in Chino Hills gets OK

The Chino school board has unanimously accepted the final environmental impact report for construction of a new junior high school, moving a step closer to the reality of an intermediate school in the Chino Hills.

The board acted this week after considerable discussion in which a resident next door to the proposed school site continued her objections.

Despite the board's acceptance of the majority of suggestions made by Yvonne Elson for a traffic study and other mitigating measures and the opinion from their attorney that the environmental impact report met state guidelines, the board was uncertain if Mrs. Elson will still take the district to court.

Mrs. Elson, who said she was a professional planner, was the lone voice of dissent on the selection of the old Hilldale Farm property as the location for the first junior high school in the Chino Hills. She mentioned a petition signed by other opponents of the site, but did not disclose the number of persons signing it.

On the other hand, Pam De Sarro, president of the Glenmeade Elementary School PTA, presented another petition containing the signatures of 421 persons supporting the school site.

She said the site was the safest and most logical, would benefit Chino Hills and city of Chino children by taking the load off Magnolia and Ramona junior high schools and serve the majority of the present and future Chino Hills families.

Gary Borcherding, admitting concern for market value and resalability of homes adjacent to the site, consulted local realtor Mike Price on the subject. Borcherding said Price authorized him to quote him in saying there would be no adverse effects on adjoining properties.

Clayton Parker, legal counsel for the district, said in response to Trustee Lou Moreno's queries that the environmental impact report met all the legal and state requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act.

Trustee Dan Santo, who voted against a previous EIR that said there would be no adverse environmental effects, supported the new document, saying it addressed most of his concerns.

He asked the EIR acceptance be coupled with mitigating measures such as a traffic study, installation of an environmental buffer between homes and the school and the use of monitors from the San Bernardino County Museum to collect, upon excavation, any artifacts uncovered.

Master gardener

By MIKE NUNN

Dear Master Gardener:

Q. I would like to grow some house plants but I have not had much experience in this area. Do you have any suggestions as to some plants that would be good for a beginner to start with?

A. Growing plants indoors is primarily a matter of selection. The indoor environment which is regulated for human comfort is generally an environment that is not ideally suited for most plants, however plants are adaptable and if you are careful in selecting the plants that can adapt to your particular areas you can have beautiful indoor plants.

The primary factor to consider is the amount of available light. There are several plants that can withstand low light and high temperatures better than others and it would be best to start with these if you have not grown house plants before.

Some of the plants in this category would include the Chinese evergreen, grape or devil's ivy, Japanese yew, jade plant, India rubber plant, holly fern, heartleaf philodendron, and the snake plant. When purchasing any plant it is always a good idea to ask the nurseryman under what conditions it will grow best.

Q. I recently purchased a Ficus benjamina. After I brought it home and placed it in what I thought was a good location with good lighting it started to drop leaves. I have been giving it plenty of water and what I thought was good care. What could be the problem?

A. There most likely is no problem. This type of tree dislikes being moved. Normally it will drop leaves for a while due to the shock of a changed location. Any time you move this tree you can expect some leaf drop.

The important thing to do when this happens is to do nothing. Do not increase the water supply and do not add extra fertilizer. The tree will adapt and the leaves will come back.

As a matter of reference the tree dislikes dark growing conditions, drafts, over-watering, and sudden changes in environment. It thrives on rich, steadily moist soil, frequent light feeding and abundant light.

Q. How do I grow and care for a Feijoa?

White House has ultimate VIP eatery

By MARGUERITE SULLIVAN
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — It may be the most exclusive restaurant in the world. Its membership is coveted and select. And when guests — from captains of industry to Hollywood celebrities — are invited in, they act like tourists: They steal the matches.

The restaurant is the White House Mess, dubbed for a ship's mess because it is run by the Navy.

The Mess — actually there are three of them clustered together — is located in the bowels of the White House, just yards from the top-secret situation room, where the world's condition is monitored.

The rooms look unimportant, but the diners who eat there could hardly be more important. How they rank is where they eat.

The senior Mess, called "The Hot Rocks' Lunch Room" by jealous lower-level staffers who cannot eat there, is the VIP room of White House eatery. Vice President George Bush eats there, as do Presidential Counselor Edwin Meese III, Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, Deputy Chief of Staff Michael Deaver and National Security Adviser William Clark. Only the most senior of White House staff — deputy assistants to the president and above — and their guests are allowed in.

The Mess gets three-star ratings the White House staff.

"It's a very nice place to eat, and a great place to take guests," said Ron Frankum, White House deputy science adviser. "They see a lot of people who are making the news every day. The food is very good; I've never had a bad meal."

Ed Gray, director of the White House Office of Policy Information, is another booster. "It's the No. 1 perk for someone working here," he said.

Down from that pinnacle of White House eateries are the next two messes, which together contain several dozen tables for mid-level White House staffers. The food, the waiters and the prices are the same in all three. While senior staffers might "eat down" by frequenting the other two messes, middle-level aides certainly can't "eat up" unless invited.

In size and adornments, the wood-paneled rooms resemble the officers' ward room on a ship. There are no windows. Along the walls are pictures of sailing vessels. A ship's clock chimes the hour.

The messes might be the world's most exclusive dining rooms, but the accoutrements aren't all that fancy. The rooms, particularly the senior Mess have an air of subdued elegance, but plain Navy china and silverware are used, and the menu is simple.

The food is good, certainly by Washington standards.

The White House Mess can be a place to get a lot of business transacted, particularly at a big table in the larger, middle-level room where a lot of "singles" — eaters without partners — sit.

"You might catch Jim Baker at lunch or Ed Meese and be able to have that 'meeting' over lunch that you otherwise would have to wait maybe days to get set up," said one aide.

"It's nice to just come in and take a seat at the large round table and catch up on what is going on in other parts of the White House," said Gray.

The fare is considerably cheaper than "outside" Washington restaurants. The daily specials run about $4, and the standard lunch is between $3.50 and $5. A strip steak is about $10. The prices are sufficient to cover all costs of the non-profit restaurants.

White House staffers get their bill once a month, and that poses a problem. Plenty of folks — from lobbyists to senators — would be more than willing to take a White House staffer to lunch, but at the Mess the tab must be picked up by the staffer.

Reporters are persona non grata. The rationale, apparently, is that they might listen in on conversations.

If reporters aren't there, a lot of celebrities are, from National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle to the singing Osmonds.

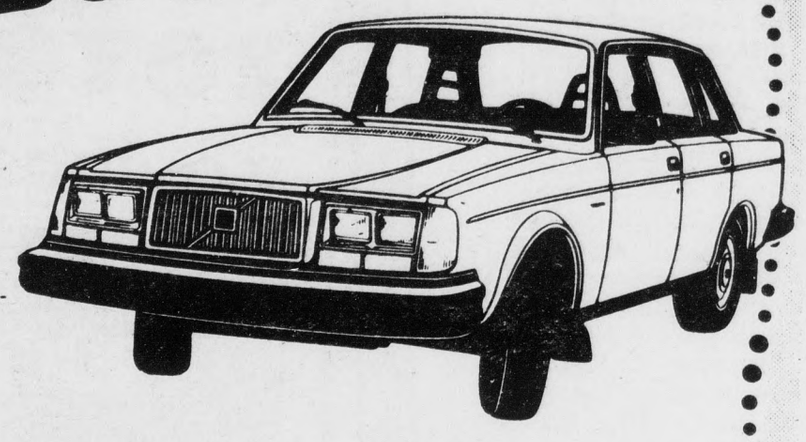

Although the vice president frequents the senior Mess, a presidential appearance is an occasion. Ronald Reagan has dined there at least once, according to staffers.

Table-hopping is in, for there's nothing like going back to your office and saying you ate lunch at the table next to the vice president.

The Mess is open for breakfast and lunch.

Staffs from past administrations were big on vending machine food; the Reagan crowd isn't, so this administration turned the fast food room into a proper restaurant. Now no one, at least none of the exclusive diners, knows — or cares — whether there's a vending machine left at the White House.

Firm will remove graffiti

August 19, 1982 San Dimas Press, LaVerne Leader, The Bulletin; Upland News; Rancho Cucamonga Times; Montclair Tribune

The people who operate Mission Mobile Wash have a new business that they think is something special. It features a machine that removes paint and graffiti.

The company, owned by Jim Kelber, and Dwight and Ted Bert, all of Upland, has a mobile powerwash that operates from a van. It has been in business for a couple of months.

"We own the Mission Car Wash in Upland and the Chino Valley Car Wash in Chino," Kelber said. "We had people contact us about some different kinds of washing other than car washing. We started doing some research and came up with a piece of equipment that seems to be multipurpose."

He said the machine works under high pressure, putting out 2,150 pounds per square inch at 210 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Through that pressure and that heat," Kelber said, "it's able to remove most graffiti."

Recently, he said, the van was at Chaffey High School in Ontario removing paint and graffiti from the concrete and tile at the boiler room.

Other than graffiti removal, according to Kelber, the machine's applications include fleet washing, concrete cleaning, cleaning boats, airplanes and heavy equipment, wet sandblasting, sanitizing and disinfecting inside buildings and industrial degreasing.
